

I am writing in regards to the new low power FM expansion. As I understand this, these stations would have priority current FM translator service. I am a dedicated listener to KLOVE on 104.3 fm and am concerned about the potential loss of this station. KLOVE serves the community by offering programming this is not currently available in this area. Their music only format offers a program of positive influence that is welcomed by many, me included. The potential loss of an established station would be a loss to the community. KLOVE has established itself as a welcome alternative to the regular radio stations that are in existence. KLOVE's message is important to my family and community. We love the fact we can listen to the same program across the country on various stations. A consistent message via KLOVE brings people across the country together. I would hate to lose KLOVE. Please find an alternative method to introduce LPFM without displacing the many existing and positive influences of established FM stations. We should not have to lose existing stations to allow for this expansion. New is not always better. Thank you
